FLAVOR OF THE MONTH FEBRUARY

It took four decades, but after moving into the number one spot as favorite, it's stayed there for twenty-five years. Kenneth Henson, a cowboy at heart, loved to cook; so in 1954 he moved west and started a dude ranch, the Hidden Valley Ranch in California. The ranch struggled to be profitable, and Kenneth had to sell acreage to survive. But guests loved his cooking, especially his salad dressing, which they often requested after leaving. Kenneth sent them his Buttermilk Ranch blend of spices to be mixed with mayonnaise and buttermilk. The rest is history. With success there are always haters—they've called it "milk-rot" and a "culinary disgrace." But it just keeps on selling. "Ride on, Cowboy!"
