FLAVOR OF THE MONTH FEBRUARY
Chocolate

Humility is a scarce commodity in a world of self-promotion. The story is told of two soldiers struggling to move a heavy log while one man stood watching. A rider on a horse arrived and dismounted to help. When he asked the bystander why he was not helping, the reply was, "I'm the corporal. I give orders." With the rider's help, the log was dislodged. The rider was Commander in Chief George Washington. As he rode off, he addressed the corporal. "The next time your men need help, send for the commander in chief." Washington had that same humility entering the presidency, feeling inadequate and likening it to a man going to his execution. Humility—powerful in leadership.
