"Winner!" Back from shopping, she held the pack of toilet paper high, like a trophy. She told her family, "We don't need it now, but I thought 'What if we need it later and they're out?'" And so, we start a panic. That purchasing decision was from a rational mom of 3 young children. The coronavirus is the most disruptive force I've witnessed in my 42 year food career. Empty shelves strike fear in all of us. One thing I know—there is enough food for all of us. Globally, we produce 50% more food than we consume. Shortages are timing issues. And, about toilet paper: Who needs it? Isn't that why we have mismatched socks?
