It's not exclusive, but we see it constantly. Men love the fight, the thrill of victory. They chop, they mow, they weed eat. They find sanity in the constant struggle of keeping Mother Nature under control. Or at least, presentable. Women, on the other hand, like to watch things grow; they nurture. They encourage the plant that's struggling. They fertilize, they water, they give it advice. Plants respond just as we all do when cared for—we flourish. No matter where we are in life, we started with survival. Our first effort at survival was a baby's cry, as our mother held us. We needed nourishment, we needed changing, we needed... And that's why Mark Coblenz
God gave us mothers.
